How often is anger due to personal resentment? This can make us feel that anger is something to be ashamed of. There are, however, good reasons to be angry. Jesus was indignant at the evils ruining men: vices, dishonesty, hyposcrisy, pride... Without the abhorrence of evil, kindness becomes purposeless and diminished. Yet, condemnation alone accomplishes nothing. Jesus looked for and appreciated the beginnings of goodness in people as well; he could see the potential of what might be. He was never indignant of private wrongs, only of public evils. Hate evil because of the love you have for people.
